

The famous Pete Cowen (tour player coach) often demonstrates the hammer onto the nail drill.

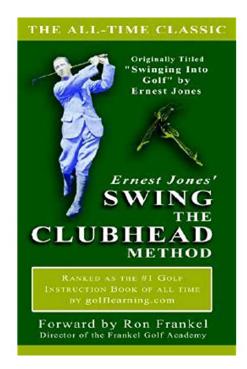

Mellhorn from back in the 1930's taught with a grass cutter to help students understand how the golf club worked.

Cutting tree with axe is the same action as golf as shown here.

At the 1936 Annual PGA Meeting, Ernest Jones presented on golf instruction. In his subsequent letter to Betty Hicks he wrote that the president of the PGA advised that teaching could not be that simple or they would all be out of a job.

Sir Henry Cotton (British Open winner of 1934, 1937, 1948) taught his golf students by hitting a tyre. He believed that going through positions did not help learning golf. Rather hitting a tyre was the most effective.

Wally Armstrong (Tour Player) teaches golf using many different objects and tools that we all know how to use already.

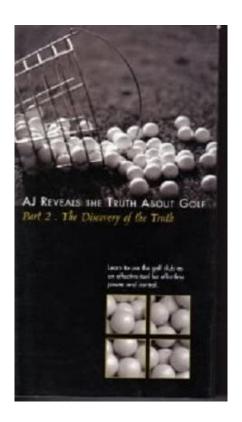

Vivien Saunders (winner of the Ladies British Open 1977, founder of the Ladies PGA and Solhiem Cup team coach) teaches Ernest Jones style often demonstrating with a tennis racket. Would always explain golf teaching is too complicated.

"The objective of the player is not to swing the club in a specified manner, nor to execute a series of complicated movements in a prescribed sequence, nor to look pretty while he is doing it, but primarily and essentially to strike the ball with head of the club so that the ball will perform according to his wishes."

The Legend Bobby Jones (winner of the grand slam in 1930) was always quoted that golf teaching had taken a wrong turn in teaching complicated body movements and positions and must get back to just swinging the golf club.

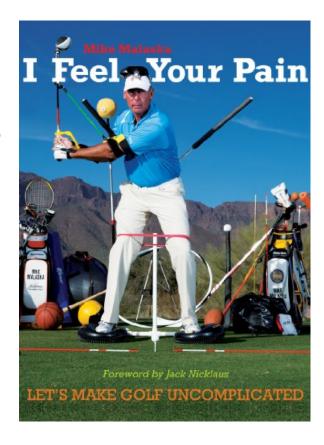

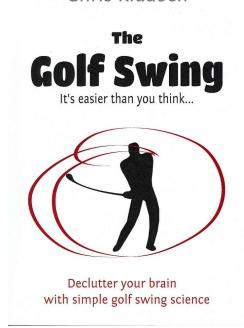

Aj Bonar (professor of golf teaching at the San Diego University for 13 years) is very famous in USA with his DVD's explaining the problems of golf teaching and where it all originates.

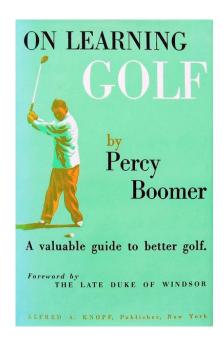

Mike Malaska (worked with Jack Nicklaus) teaches with Hockey sticks and other sports tools to help the student learn golf. He himself spent 20 years with bad information that ruined his Tour playing career.

Chris Riddoch

Published in 2012. Stating that what Ernest Jones was saying in 1927 is now scientifically proven to be correct.

Published in 1946. "THIS is not a book on the science of golf, but about learning it. Everything on the science of the game has been written, little on how to learn it."

